1. The greater part of the Stralsund Building Construction Union's workers at the Jasmund Bay submarine haven have left. The work is almost finished. Only Volkspolizei vehicles are now engaged in transporting earth material. Great interest is displayed at present in the installations, blown up in 1945, which served the seaplanes of the former German Navy.
2. The Seepolizei radio station at Glowe, Rügen, has been considerably enlarged and modernized. Up to now the receiving station was at Glowe and the sending station was 12 kilometers away, near Lome. The sender worked provisionally at 500 KHZ (sea distress wave). Now a direct cable is being laid to Wolgast and in the direction of the Polish Baltic area. At the same time, voice radio installations for the floating Seepolizei which guards coast security are being established. Also a direct line has been laid to Usedom, where a so-called coast guard battalion is stationed.
3. A Seepolizei unit is now located at Cröslin, receiving instruction in torpedo and mine work. It is a special unit, assembled at Wolgast, and will train crews for the first special submarine boats of the Seepolizei. These submarines reportedly are to be built in the People's Republic (DDR).
